

DIDN'T GAMBLE, IS COURT'S DECISION

Victims of Police Raid Are Freed of Charge in City Court.

Six defendants, arrested in a raid by the police Saturday night on the Niedbalski and Raczyński pool hall, 1135 W. Division st., were found not guilty of gambling charges by Judge Chester L. DuComb in city court Wednesday. The hearing was concluded Monday afternoon when the court took the cases under advisement.

Those freed by the court's orders of acquittal were: Alfie Hazinski, Frank Strogowski, John Smith, Paul Wetland and John Ross, charged with frequenting, and Leo Niedbalski, the proprietor, charged with operating a gambling house. Atty. W. A. Grezeski represented the defendants.

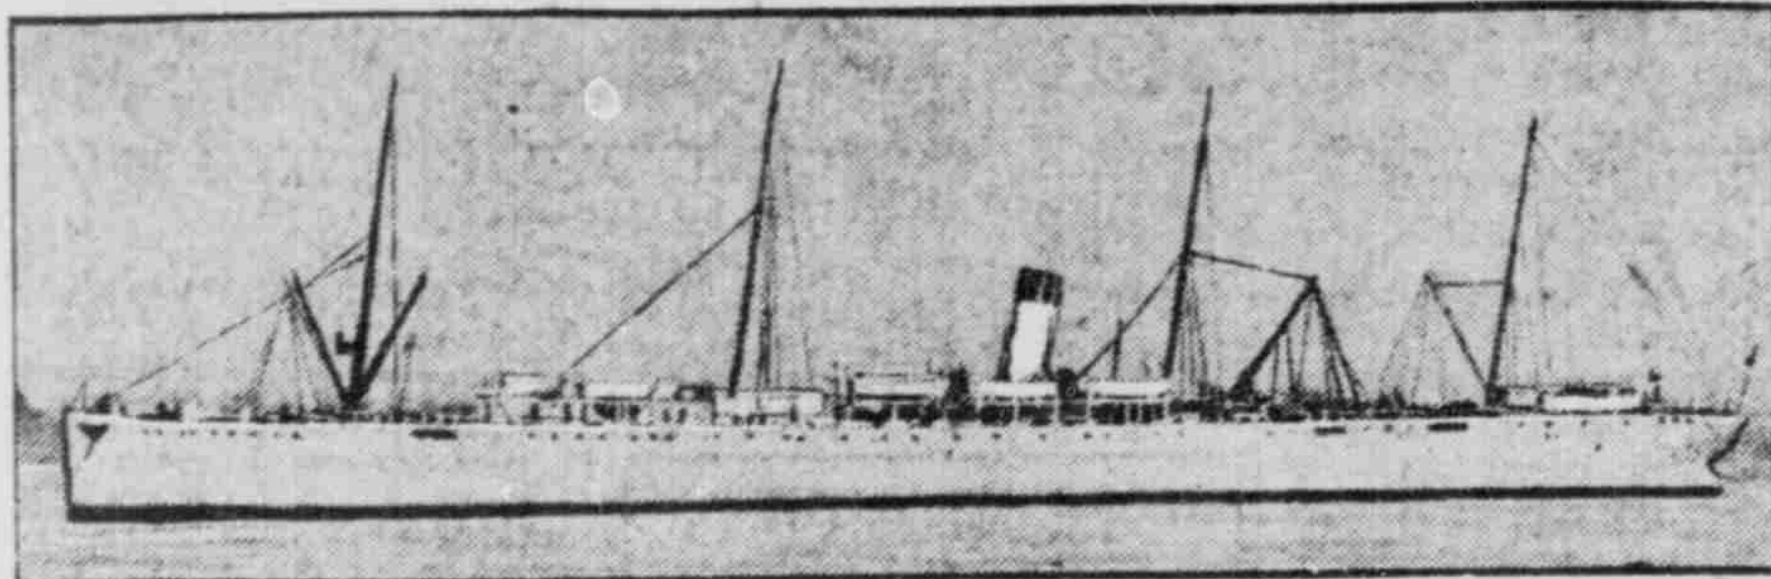

In ruling in favor of the defendants, Judge DuComb declared that the evidence did not show exchange of money between players or that the defendant proprietor or other "house man" was in charge of the game when the officers raided the place. The alleged existence of a buzzer which was used to "tip off" the players, the arrival of the officers, which fact was elaborated upon by Dep. Pros. A. H. Hamborsky as eloquent testimony of the character of the game, did not prove gambling, according to the court.
